

Exploring Ecospirituality: Faith, Earth Ethics and Professional Life

Free evening seminar - Melbourne, Tuesday 18th August - 5.30pm for a 6pm start
Ceres Van Ray Centre, Corner Stewart and Roberts Streets, Brunswick East Vic 3057

Ecospirituality means different things to different people. At its essence it encapsulates a belief about the deep and sacred interconnectedness of all life and life supporting systems on earth. At a time when industrial societies face deep challenges brought about by climate change and our destruction of the natural world, can ecospirituality help foster Earth ethics and Earth centred professional practice?

Please join us for a fascinating seminar and join this important discussion. We'll begin with three inspirational speakers: Dr Michelle Maloney, Lawyer and Director of the Australian Earth Laws Alliance, Ross Inness McLeish, Research Fellow and Dr Samuel Alexander, Co-Director, The Simplicity Institute. Presentations will then be followed by facilitated discussions with audience participants.

This event is part of a national seminar series called "Exploring Ecospirituality" hosted by AELA and our partners around Australia. In Melbourne, AELA is pleased to be co-hosting this event with Earth Song and Sophia's Spring, an eco-feminist community of the Uniting Church at CERES.
