Is it possible to develop a new environmental awareness and embed it into current environmental law by comparing different cultural models, some of which have been structured around sustainable practices of steady-state economies for thousands of years? Is it possible to do so while advancing an economic discourse that combines sound economic practices and sustainable ethical approaches?

To discuss these questions Earth Laws Inc. - International Research Network on Earth Jurisprudence and Legal Ontologies, in conjunction with the Legal Intersections Research Centre and the Faculty of Law at the University of Wollongong, the Sandon Point Aboriginal Tent Embassy, the World Movement of the Schools of Ethics and Economics, and the School of Law and Justice at the Southern Cross University, is organising a symposium titled Keeping The Fire - Cultural Integrity, Wild Law and Economic Development, composed of three interconnected events: the official Welcome to Country and the launch of the Sandon Point Project, the Fifth Forum North/South of the Movement of the Schools of Ethics and Economics and the Second Australian Conference on Wild Law and Earth Jurisprudence.

Reserve your place now: participation to the conference is limited to a maximum of 100 participants

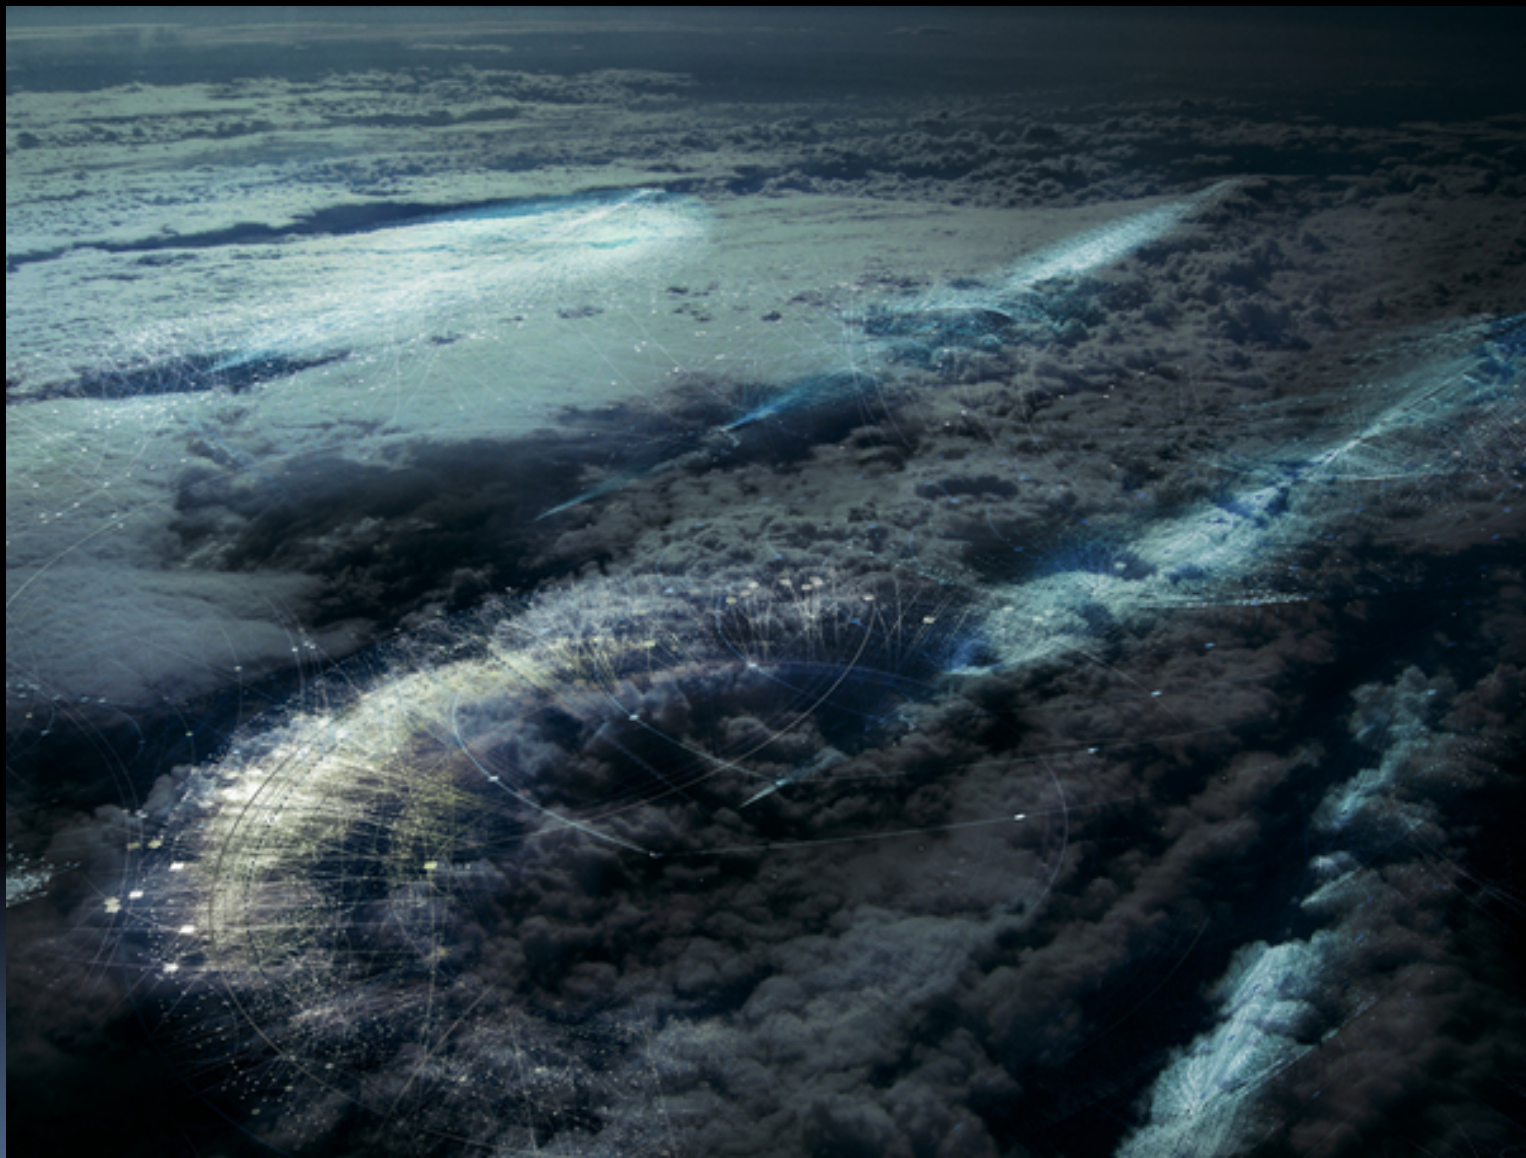

Early Bird Rate has been extended until 30 May 2010

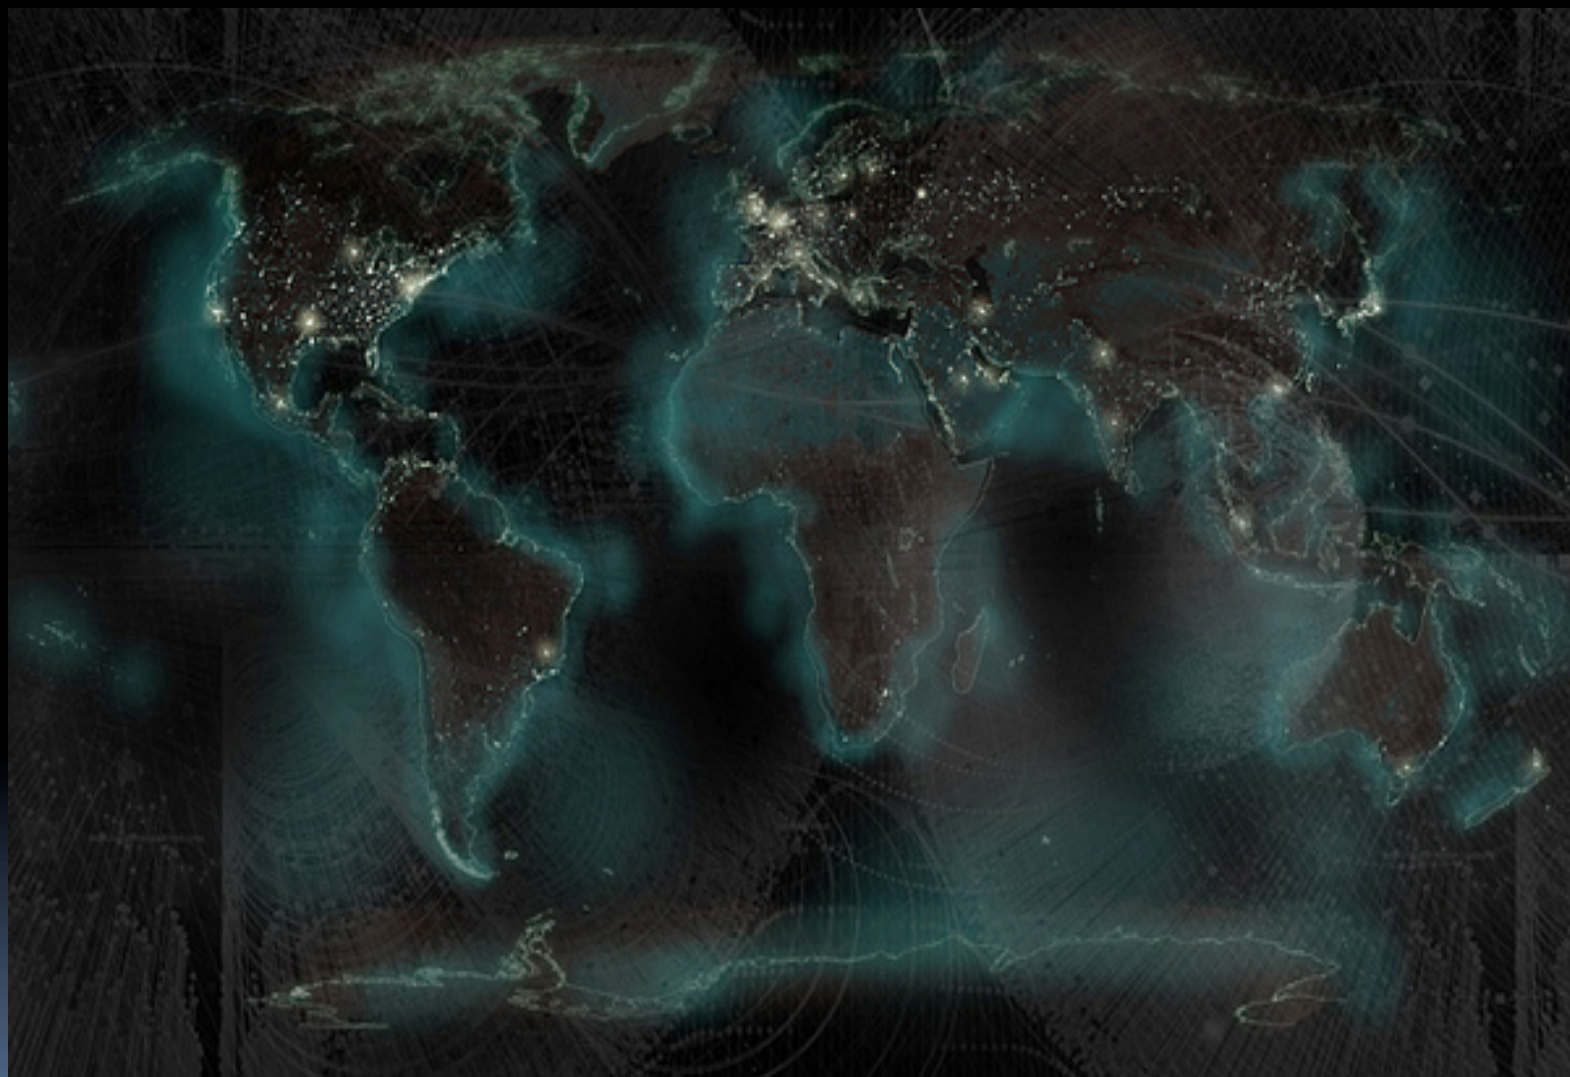

Sponsorship options are available to cover registration costs. Find more on the website.

[A]ny attempt to envisage phenomena without the human gaze is an inherently empty gesture since any such attempt invokes 'a vision in which we see nothing, since the object of this vision is a movement that glides from things that have no meaning by themselves to the world full of meaning implied by man.'
